

Leaving a Legacy of Play

Estate Planning & Legacy Gifts

Protect. Educate. Empower.

It's what we do for 1.52 million children around the world.

Children are amongst the most vulnerable group of people in the world. Many of their futures are limited by violence, exploitation and inequality. Every day, they struggle to attend and stay in school, to avoid abuses, to be treated with dignity and respect and to be safe. Your planned gift in support of Right To Play will empower children to rise above these challenges and find their way back to hope and leave a lasting legacy of play.

Play Saves Lives . . .

Right To Play harnesses one of the most fundamental forces in every child's life, the power of play. Our programs help to keep children in school and out of work, teach them how to prevent disease and resolve conflicts, give them the confidence to challenge harmful traditions and practices, to dismantle barriers, and create opportunities. Play teaches communication and collaboration, it helps children heal from the harsh realities of war and abuse.

We play for change in 4 key areas:

QUALITY

GENDER EQUALITY

CHILD PROTECTION

HEALTH & WELL-BEING

Play is Powerful

By including Right To Play in your estate planning, you are taking a powerful step to help bring play into the lives of children who need it most. Your future gift is an investment in all forms of play - games, sport, poetry, performance, dance, art and music – and will create a lasting legacy of empowered children equipped with the knowledge and skills to drive change in their lives, their families and their communities.

Leaving a Legacy of Play Estate Planning & Legacy Gifts

Leaving a Legacy of Play

Choosing to remember Right To Play in your will or in your estate plans is a powerful and transformational commitment. Your legacy gift can unlock the infinite potential of vulnerable children around the world. Your planned gift could be the difference between a child unable to escape a life of violence, conflict, poverty and disease and one filled with health, safety, prosperity, possibility, and hope.

What's more is that leaving a legacy gift is likely simpler than you think. Legacy gifts often allow you to leave a larger gift in the future than might be possible during your lifetime. A legacy gift can take many forms. The most straightforward of which is to make a gift by will, also known as a bequest. Bequests allow you to leave a specified amount or percentage of the residue of your estate to charities of your choice. When you do this, your estate will receive a charitable tax receipt that can lower or even eliminate estate taxes.

Leaving a legacy gift to Right To Play is an important decision, so you should discuss your plans with your family and loved ones, and speak to your financial planner about what type of planned gift might be right for you, and lastly connect with your lawyer for help preparing or revising your will, or adding a codicil.

Once you have decided to make a legacy gift to Right To Play, be sure to inform us by completing the enclosed Statement of Intent form. It will give us the opportunity not only to thank you, but more importantly, it will ensure you learn about the incredible impact your gift will have in the future. Your Statement of Intent is not legally binding, but is an important signal for us at Right To Play that you have taken steps to make a gift in the future. Lastly, it will make sure we respect and comply with any instructions you may have about the privacy and confidentiality of your gift.

Every planned gift, regardless of its size and method will leave a lasting Legacy of Play for generations to come.
